Mr. Thomas P. Leary, who has been making her home in the West for the greater part of the past two years, expects to return to Richmond next month to spend some time with relatives here. Mrs. Leary has been with her daughter, Mrs. S. Haskett Derby, in California during her stay in the West. Thomas Leary, Jr., will leave week after next for San Francisco, Cal., where he will join his mother, and, after a short visit to Mr. and Mrs. Derby, return with her to Richmond. Move into New Home.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Smyth have moved into their handsome new home, which has recently been completed on Monument Avenue. Mrs. Smyth's sister, Miss Therese Nurney, of Suffolk, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Smyth here for several weeks.

Here On a Visit. James Durham Barrow and Miss Mabel Spauld, both of Winston-Salem, N. C., were married on October 8 and left immediately to visit several North Carolina cities. They are now in Richmond, visiting Mrs. Ernest Hawks and Mr. Barrow, on Floyd Avenue. The groom is connected with the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company at Winston-Salem, and is a nephew of J. B. Barrow, of Richmond.

Big Dinner Party. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Binswanger, of 2229 Monument Avenue, were hosts at a very handsome dinner party last evening at the Jefferson Hotel in honor of Miss Kate Binswanger, whose marriage to Carl J. Herman was an important event of the night. The guests were seated at one long table arranged with quantities of lovely red roses, and red flowers were scattered at intervals along the cloth. Palms and bay leaves were grouped in the corners of the dining-room, and an orchestra played during dinner. Covers were laid for forty-one. A number of charming functions have been given for Miss Binswanger prior to her marriage, and a great many guests from a distance are in Richmond to attend the ceremony to-night, which is to be celebrated at the Jefferson Hotel.

PRESIDENT POINCARE POPULAR IN FRANCE

Good Will on Part of the People Extends to All Classes.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FORTENOY. PRESIDENT POINCARE enjoys at the present moment a greater popularity in France, and of prestige abroad, than any of his predecessors in the chief magistracy of the Third Republic ever managed to attain. This good will on the part of the people extends to all classes of his countrymen, irrespective of their political preferences or social status. For, apart from anything else, he commands their respect as a man of strong individuality.

This respect found remarkable expression during the progress which he made through the central, southern and western districts of France, before starting last week on his visit to Madrid. The enthusiasm which his presence evoked everywhere was of an almost phenomenal character. Indeed, so great were the ovations accorded to him in all the cities, towns and villages which he visited by rail, by motor, and, above all, by automobile, that they could hardly be ascribed to the respect for a man of strong individuality. This respect found remarkable expression during the progress which he made through the central, southern and western districts of France, before starting last week on his visit to Madrid. The enthusiasm which his presence evoked everywhere was of an almost phenomenal character. Indeed, so great were the ovations accorded to him in all the cities, towns and villages which he visited by rail, by motor, and, above all, by automobile, that they could hardly be ascribed to the respect for a man of strong individuality.

Frenchmen, even among his own Cabinet ministers, seem to feel that in many ways the President is more than making up for the time lost to the people at large, and, indeed, the greater part of her huge colonial empire in Africa, was recently kept away from Paris, and whenever he comes out of France, for fear lest he should become the popular idol, and as such too powerful a factor in the political situation. They have already started a campaign against President Poincare, on the ground of his holding the office of President, and, with this in view, are seeking to turn into ridicule, at his expense, some of the comical features of his southern progress, as, for instance, when the Mayor of one of the villages in the vicinity of Perpignan, particularly noted for its truffles, received the President, at the head of the municipality, in full evening dress with a stove pipe hat of ancient vintage, and a large black and white around his neck, and holding in his hand a champagne bottle for the President to drink from.

After the Mayor had delivered his speech, the President, in a graceful and unassuming way, took a truffle from the Mayor's pocket, and, with a smile, placed it in his mouth. The Mayor, in the presence of the President, several most successful comedians, carefully interred in a convenient spot for the purpose, and which were thereupon presented to the chief magistrate of France and to his lady, to carry away with them, as souvenirs of the place.

This episode, which a number of others of the same kind, have been reproduced by cinematograph, and it will readily be seen how, by means of a little ingenuity, their portrayal can be converted by those jealous of the President's popularity into an arm against him, through appealing to the sense of the ridicule and to the irreverence for which the Parisians are so famous. In France, or rather, I should say, in Paris, it is ridiculous that kills.

President Poincare will have a hard road to travel during the coming winter. Knives have been sheathed until now are being sharpened for the purpose of assailing him—not in front, but in the back—and they are wielded more especially by those on whose loyalty he has particularly strong claims. Indeed, he will find many an occasion for repeating during the next few months the old-time adage: "God save me from my friends; my enemies I can deal with myself."

Everybody who has spent any time at St. Petersburg will recall the name of Mme. d'Albedinsky, by birth a Princess Dolgorouka, and whose salons on the banks of the Neva enjoyed for more than half a century, altogether international renown. She has just passed away at Cannes, in the South of France, after a long illness. Celebrated for her beauty, both at home and abroad, she enjoyed, even as a young girl, so great an influence upon Emperor Alexander II., that she used to be known as the Russian court as "La Grande Dame de France." She had been willing, might easily have become the Sultan of the Liberator, during the lifetime of Czarina Marie, and his morganatic wife after the Emperor's death.

It was, indeed, because she would not sacrifice to him her honor, that he turned in despair to her frailer and, in every sense of the word, less witty and fascinating, yet beautiful cousin, Catherine Dolgorouka, who bore him three children prior to the legalization of his relations with her by a left-handed union. It was because she was so absolutely straight that Mme. d'Albedinsky, who afterwards married the gallant soldier of that name who died as Governor-General of Poland—was so respected, not only by Alexander II., but also by his two successors on the throne, and by the entire imperial family; a striking evidence of their regard being that she received a well-nigh unique decoration, which she wore on special occasions, and consisting of the miniature portraits of the three Emperors, namely, the consorts of Alexander II., of Alexander III., and of Nicholas II., set in diamonds, and pinned to the left shoulder of the corsage of her dress by a diamond-studded bow. It was for this that in later years she was known at court as the "Imperial Portrait" (the lady of the portrait).

Possessed of the utmost tact and sureness of judgment, with an unrivaled experience of the political and social life of St. Petersburg for half a century, her advice was sought by the various members of the reigning family, as well as by statesmen of every degree; and much of the history of Russia has been made in her salons. Very gentle, wholly devoid of arrogance, she conveyed the impression of shyness rather than of assurance—this due perhaps to her shortightedness—but with all that, every one of her brothers and sisters deferred to her. They included Prince "Sandy," grand master of the court of St. Petersburg; General Prince Nicholas Dolgorouka, long a figure at the court of Berlin, and who was afterwards Russian ambassador at Rome; Prince Dimitri, long attached to the embassy in London, and Prince Alexis, who married to Miss Fleetwood Wilson, an English heiress, spends much of his time in Great Britain. Her sisters were the Princess Solty-

CHINESE CRUISER IS SATISFACTORY

Vessel Built in This Country Is Given Test, Which Proves Successful.

Philadelphia, October 13.—The speed trials of the Chinese cruiser Fei Hung off the Delaware Capes during the last few days were very successful, according to a statement given out to-day by the New York Shipbuilding Company, which recently completed the warship for the Chinese government. The Fei Hung arrived at the company's yard at Camden, N. J., to-day to be prepared for her long voyage to the East.

The trials, according to the company, have proved the ship, which is fitted with all the latest devices and improvements, to be the speediest of her class afloat. Guaranteed by her builders to maintain a speed of 20 knots an hour, the Fei Hung attained a speed of 22 1/2 knots. A twenty-four hours endurance trial at a speed of 18 knots was run to determine the fuel consumption, and this test was also declared to be satisfactory. All the guns in the ship's armament were tested, being fired with full battle charges, and Chinese officers, who were on the ship, expressed themselves as satisfied with the performance of the ship.

The Fei Hung is a protected cruiser of about 2,600 tons displacement. She is 320 feet long. The propelling machinery consists of three steam turbines, which are supplied with steam by three water tube boilers, one of which is fitted for burning oil fuel. The armament of the Fei Hung consists of two six-inch, four four-inch, two three-inch rapid fire guns, six three pounders, two one pound automatic guns and two eighteen-inch torpedo tubes.

RECEIVER IS APPOINTED.
Owners of Theatre and City Market Plan Reorganization.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Fayetteville, N. C., October 13.—On application of a stockholder, Judge C. C. Lyon has named S. H. Buck as receiver of the Lafayette Auditorium Company, of this city, owners of the Lafayette Theatre and the city market, which are in one building. Mr. Buck will continue to operate both the theatre and market.

Fifteen stockholders of the auditorium company say that they have not been making money, contrary to a general impression, and declare that they are discouraged by what they describe as the unfriendly attitude of the municipal authorities. It is said the company will be reorganized.

MORE THAN 2 WHOLE WEEKS TO PLAY THIS $1,200 GAME

Put in Evenings and Sundays Solving Pictures! Then Accept $100 in Cash!

The game you play is called the Booklovers' Contest Game. It is simply a series of seventy-seven pictures, each of which represents the title of a book. All seventy-seven pictures have been published, and you can get them right now, in a bunch. At the same time you can get a list of 5,000 book titles, seventy-seven of which are guaranteed to be the correct titles to the seventy-seven pictures. And you can get an Answer Book, in which while having only one copy of each picture, you can make as many as ten answers to each one.

This is how to get the pictures, the catalogue and the Answer Book: The catalogue, containing the seventy-seven contest titles, 35 cents. With it the first thirty-five pictures free. The pictures from No. 36 to No. 70, inclusive, free. Last seven pictures at 2 cents each, 14 cents. Total cost of complete contest equipment, $1.24; by mail, $1.40.

You pay as much as that to go to the theatre for one evening. Here is a game that will interest you mightily for several evenings, and if you play it with ingenuity, pay you $100 in gold coin.

Since you have supplied yourself with this outfit the contest cannot cost you more, for there is absolutely nothing more to purchase. And think of what it may return to you! You can buy pictures, Answer Books and catalogues for 25¢ each. Get the contest outfit to-day and go after that $100 in cash, first award.
